CIRCULAR.

In accordance with instructions from Brigadier General D. H. Rucker, Chief Quartermaster, Depot of Washington, I have placed schooners at Upper and Lower Cedar Points, in the positions occupied by the light boats, previous to their destruction by the rebels.

From sunset until sunrise a light will be swang from each of the schooners. The reason given by captains of vessels, chartered and owned by the United States Quartermaster Department, for archering in the Petomac river at night, was, that they feared that they would run their vessels aground if they attempted to run past the shoals after dark. The lamps placed on the schooners will give a light sufficiently strong to enable all pilots to pass up and down the river with safety, provided they govern themselves by the charts provided by United States Coast Survey.

From and after this date, no vessel propelled by steam will be allowed to anchor, excepting in mah weather as by running the loss of the vessel or cargo might be endangered.

All masters of vessels are directed to report any heglect on the part of the parties on board of the light schooners, in not keeping their lights burning at all hours of the night.

A copy of this circular will be kept posted in the pilot house of every vessel owned and chartered by the Government, plying on the Potomac rive E. S. ALLEN.

LOCAL NEWS.

SERENADE TO SECRETARY CHASE AND OTHERS.—Monday night, after the adjournment of the regular meeting of the Lincoln and Johnson Club, a large number of the members, headed by the splendid band attached to Finley Hospital, called at the house of ex-Secretary Chase and gave him a serenade. After repeated calls Mr. Chase appeared and was greeted with much applause, and addressed hose assmbled, saying : "Fellow citizens: I thank you for the com pliment of this call. As I am not a man holding office, nor a candidate for office, I may, without vanity, regard this demonstration as a mark of personal good will, and of approval for services which it has been my fortune to render in times past.

"Since my return to the honorable position of a private citizen, I have thought that I was entitled to a short vacation of a few weeks, after unremitted labor for eight or nine years. I have returned among you for a brief period, with renewed health and vigor. I propose soon to ge to my own great State in the West, there to advocate the cause so dear to you all. [Applause]. I believe you call yourself the Lincoln and Johnson Club. ["We do."] These names represent to us, to-day, principles and a policy, designs and purposes, by which alone we believe this country can be saved. Of these principles I have been an earnest advocate, to use a legal phrase, for a length of time 'whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.' I shall not be likely now to forget them, or cease to inculcate them to my fellow citizens. [Applause and cheers]. If all the voters would take my advice, there would not be a vote cast except for those two gentlemen. [Renewed applause]. A great many, no doubt, and, in my humble judgment, a large majority will be given for them.

"The Baltimore platform, upon which these nominees were placed, comprises three great principles: First, Union, one and indivisible. That Union embraces in its extent the whole country-every hill, every river, every mouth of every river, every promontory and cape wherever the flag of the Union ever floated. "The next of those principles is, that that Union has been assaulted by slavery, and slavery must die the death which it deserves. [Applause.] This principle was announced by the convention by, I suppose, a greater degree of unanimity than any other there enunclated. Is there a man here who means to deny this? Is there one who means to suffer it to be put down? ["No, no!"]

"The third principle is, the rights of Americans must be respected by all foreign countries. They have no idea of allowing princes or potentates of any country to interfere with anything that of right belongs to this country or the people of this country, or to place any obstructions in the way of the institutions and the progress of this country. [Applause.]

"The Union can only be maintained by thoroughly suppressing the rebellion, and preserving republican institutions, based upon these principles. [That's so] To this end, the people propose to maintain their armies now in the field. We do not mean to treat them with any hollow or lip sympathy; we do not mean to give any cold cuts; [laughter] but warm generous sympathy, warm generous support to the men who are fighting nder that obstinate fellow Grant, [applause] the men who have acted so splendidly in that campaign, consummated by that glorious victory, under Sherman, [renewed applause,] the men who, on the ocean wave, or in the harbors of that ocean wherever Farragut leads them, with that gallant commander used to the mast head.
[Applause.] We intend to give them ample supplies of arms, food, clothing, everything which they can need. And, while doing this, we intend to appeal to them, in the name of this great Republic, to save our national honor and our free institutions.

"We want peace, but we want it with a Union made sacred by freedom, and made permanent by foundations upon freedom and justice. [Applause.] "Which of the planks in our platform do you want taken out? Do you want any one shaved a single particle? No, no; let it stand as it is. It is all good. Let us maintain it all Let us maintain the men who support it. "I have talked a little to you to-night, my friends, and have said some things which I intended to say to the people of my own State. I have always thought that I could go to the people and tell them plainly what we need and what is right. I have never feared to appeal to their sound heads and true hearts. I have always found them willing to trust me whenever I was willing to trust them." The closing words of Secretary Chase were drowned in cheers, and again thanking the serenaders for the visit he retired. Calls were made for Senator Sprague, but it was an-nounced that that gentleman was not in the city. The crowd then moved down to the National Hotel, and after playing several airs, Senator Lane, of Kansas, was called for. No sooner had he commenced his speech than a disorderly crowd congregated on the corner of 6th street commenced to jeer and hiss and shout for McClellan and Pendleton. It was evident to all that the intention was to stop the serenade if possible. It should be stated, however, that the more respectable members of the McClellan clubs did not countenance the rowdy proceedings by their presence in large numbers, and the few who were there reprobated the acts of the rowdies. Mr. Lane said the time had come when manhood must be exhibited at home as well as in the army, and we must fight the enemy in the rear. [Hisses and cheers for McClellan and Pendleton.] Our armies have the rebellion on the hip, and we have the secret enemies to dispose of in the rear. [More hisses and calls for Voorhees, Wood, and cheers for Vallandigham. He (Mr. L.) had never yet been able to discover degrees in treason, for the preacher who prayed for success of rebellion in secret, the sympathizer who feeds the bush whacker (here the speakers voice was completely drowned by cheers for McClellan, and shouts for Vallandigham, Ben Harris, one among the crowd calling out "hurrah for Stonewall Jackson," but as soon as Mr. Lane could make himself heard he continued) and the copperhead who rejoices over our defeats, are as bad as Rebel soldiers who thrust their bayonets in the hearts of Union soldiers. [Applause and cries of "that's so." "they are worse for they are afraid to fight," The speaker then compared the copperheads of the present day to the tories of the revolution, who were hooted and sneered at by all good men, who called them cowardly scamps and afraid to fight, but who took delight in feed-ing the enemies of the country. The speaker also referred to days of the Mexican war, when disgraceful peace propositions were also broached, and an armistice proposed. [Cheers for McClellan, and one man cried out, "sooner have Jeff Davis than old Abe." Another voice called out "knock that man in the head." Mr. Lane said, never mind, they will all be dead enough in November if the loyal men will only do their duty. The memory of the cop-perheads will be cursed, and good men will spit upon their graves. [Cheers for McClellan. and counter cheers for Lincoln.] The speaker was now more in favor of this country than he ever had been, for an honorable peace would posed of Quartermaster's employees. [Cries of "That's so," "Turn them out," "Help it if of "That's so," "Turn them out," "Help it if you can," &c.] He would not say that all in that Department were Democrats, but if Mc-Clellan—[cheers for McClellan]—if McClellan Clellan—[cheers for McClellan]—If McClellan got a single electoral vote, even in the State of New Jersey, [applause on one side and hisses on the other,] it would be by reason of copperheads in the Departments. [Cheers for McClellan.] These men should all be ousted, for no one should be allowed to curry a horse for the Government unless he was a good Lincoln and Johnson voter.

Senator Chandler, of Michigan, was then called for, and he appeared at the window of his apartment. After thanking the loyal portion of the crowd for the intended honor to his friend Mr. Lane, he said there were but two parties to this contest, the friends and enemies of the Government. There is no neutral ground. One might as well stand upon the gulf that separates Dives from Lazarus, and swear that separates Dives from Lazzarus, and swear that he stood upon solid ground, as to profess neutrality in this contest. [Cheers for McClellan.] The man who would separate one State from the galaxy of thirty-four is a traitor before God and man, and would go down to his grave as a and man, and would go down to his grave as a traitor. [Applause on one side and cheers for McClellan and hisses on the other.] The man who advocates peace and disunion will not stand in history equal with Benedict Arnold His fame will be that of Judas Iscariot, [Renewed cheers for McClellan and calls for Voorhees &c., and groans for Lincolu.] Benedict Arnold area for the for his country, and afterwards once fought for his country, and afterwards turned traiter, and he fought boldly there also. He (Senator U.) would sooner be a descendant of Arnold than of any copperhead. [Cheers for McClellan and for Vallandigham.] Do you #### want to know what a copperhead is? asked Mr C. He would tell them, and he would give the copperhead traitors what they deserved if he had breath. [Applause and hisses.] When South Carolina went out— Voice .- "What did Massachusetts do."

Senator C—I'll give you all you want before I get through, you infernal copperhead. I have a dose for you if you will keep quiet." [Applause.] Mr. C. continued by saying that South Carolina raised the rattlesnake flag and twined it around the Palmetto, and gave notice that the Union must be dissolved. The rattlesnake is a reptile that is brave, and gives notice before it strikes. [Applause and hisses.] South Carolina bravely sprung her rattle. Her sons sprang to arms and took the chances of the bullet, the bayonet and the halter. [Voice.- "Bully for South Carolina."] Other States sprung the rattle and gave notice. The speaker had a profound respect for all who thus took the chances of the bullet and bayonet. But there is a reptile that is meaner than the rattlesnake, but its bite is as deadly. It lacks all the bravery of the rattlesnake. [More cheers for McClellan, and calls for various Democrats.) You find him in the long damp grass, the muddy swamps and the bayous, and it steals upon you and bites from behind. [Applause and bites from behind. [Applause and bites for media. It is the copperhead. [Applause on one side and cheers for McClellan on the other. The copperhead is a mean cuss. God forgive the copperhead, for no one else can. [Applause and hisses.] You copperheads call yourselves respectable, do you? Judas Iscariot was a poor devil. He carried the bag and wanted money, and sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver. [Voice.—"And in the long damp grass, the muddy swamps ter for thirty pieces of silver. [Voice.—"And small ones at that."] You copperhead traitors have sold your country for nought. Judas Iscariot had the decency to hang himself. Will you copperheads have the decency to hang yourselves? [Applause, hisses, and cheers for McClellan.] It you do hang yourselves you Voice.—"I am no copperhead or traitor, but I am a McClellan man." Mr. Chandler.—"I believe you are an infer-nal copperhead. I have never met a copperhead who was not a McClellan man. Now you mean copperheads, you came here to break up this Union meeting. [Voice.—"So we did, and we succeeded pretty effectually "] You are mean as hell, you infernal copperheads. You are the meanest men that could be found.' [Applause on one side, and hisses, groans and cheers for McClellan, Vallandigham and others on the other. Some one again called out "Hurrah for Stonewall Jackson."] will go down to the grave with honor equal to that of Judas. [Applause.]

Mr. Chandler continued by charging upon the Democratic party all the horrors of this war, and said that the copperheads were spattered all over with the blood of each man slain on both sides. [Voice "It was the d—d abolitionists did it."] You infernal copperheads can say so. But you are cowards as well as traitors for you dare not face the bullet and the bayonet. [Groans, and Cheers for McClellan.] Senator C.—"Howl, howl you infernal traitors, howl, for you will go down with Arnold and Iscariot, and all the traitors that have gone before." [Applause, and groans and cheers for McClellan and Pendieton.

In conclusion, the speaker gave a cheering word, that the rebellion was on its last legs; that Grant had men enough now to whip Lee on an open field, and that he would soon have enough to whip him anyhow, [applause,] but for the encouragement of northern copperheads Lee would have given up long ago.
[Applause mingled with hisses.] Speeches were made by Hon. Mr. Kellog, of Mich., and Mr. Cutchon, speaker of the House of Representatives of that State, and at a late hour, and after music by the band, the crowd separated, one crowd cheering lustly

for Lincoln, and the other for McClelian. THE COLORED RESIDENTS OF THE SEVENTH WARD AND THE DRAFT.—A very large and spirited meeting of the colored people of the Seventh Ward was held at Wesley Zion Church, D street, between 2d and 3d streets. Monday night, for the purpose of raising funds to assist in filling the quota of the ward. There was be-tween two and three hundred persons present, quite a number of whom were females.

Chair, and Abraham Dyson and Perry Rider, were elected Secretaries. Mr. Wilkinson on taking the chair thanked the meeting for the honor conferred upon him, and stated that at a meeting held at Island Hall, on Saturday night by their white brethren, a committee, consisting of Caleb Dulaney, Carl Carusi, William Becket, A. Bowen, and Wm. Cross, was appointed to collect money from the colored people of the ward. Mr. W. then proceeded to read an official notification of the appointment of the committee signed by Mr. John H. Semmes, Treasurer, and Mr. Crosby S. Noyes, President of the ward association, and stated that after consultation the committee decided to call a mass meeting of the colored people for the purpose of adopting measures to assist in ridding the ward from the pending draft. The speaker said the cause was one which could not be contributed to too liberally, and if the colored people did not aid the exemption fund they could have no claims upon it, and if drafted would have to go to the war. On motion, the report of the proceedings of the meeting held at Island Hall on Saturday night was read; after which, the Chair called tribute, when Mr. W. H. Bruce arose and said he would give $10 for a start. Mr. R F. Bartle, of the Island Hall meeting, here entered the room, and was introduced by the chairman. Mr. Bartle said he was glad to see so many present, and the object of his coming down was for the purpose of inviting the collectors to call at Island Hall and pay over the money to Mr. John H. Semmes. He suggested to those present to form themselves into a working committee, and advised all to come forward and subscribe within their means. His object, however, was not to suggest anything to those present, as they were able to make their own suggestions.

upon those present to come forward and con-

The chair invited the learned ones present to address the meeting and say a few words of encouragement. Mr. Wm. Becket was the first one to respond, who said that President Lincoln had called for men, and would have them-volunteers or conscripts. There were plenty of substitutes, and perhaps some of those in attendance at the meeting had been engaged in "running them off," but he (Mr. B.) was not one of that kind. He was an old man, but would contribute. The old men would not have to fight, but the young ones would, and they ought to come forward and contribute liberally. He wanted to save these young men if he could, but their money was the only thing that would do it. By buy. ing substitutes they did not rob the battle field. and if a certain fund was raised they would be clear for a little while at least.

Rev. Anthony Bowen was introduced to the audience, and said that it was difficult for him to be heard when there was so much confusion in the room, but if they would give him their attention, they would have an opportu-nity to criticise his remarks. He was an old man-not subject to the draft, and would not give $5 to save his own son or any one else from it, for it was a golden opportunity for the colored men to fight for their own freedom. They had greater reason to fight than any class of men in the world, and they ought to prove themselves worthy of the freedom they enjoyed. Slavery was their greatest enemy, and they must fight it down. By reading through history down to the Carthagenians, they would fearn that it was only those who fought and struggled for liberty who appreciated its blessings. If (said the speaker) there are any here who cannot go, they ought to contri-bute to send others. There was a glorious future before the colored race if they would only do their duty in the contest. If there were any who were afraid to leave their wives and children penniless, they ought to insure their lives and leave the policies home for their families.

After urging those present to act for them-selves, the speaker concluded his remarks by saying that he had told Mr. Semmes that he (Mr. B.) wanted each man's name set down opposite the sum he contributed, for he wanted the colored people to receive credit for what they did. Mr. Semmes replied that it was but just that they should receive due credit for what they did, and it would afford him pleasure to give it to them.

The committee appointed by the Island Hall The committee appointed by the Island Hall meeting here reported that they had collected. $145. One of the committee stated that the largest portion of this sum had been been received from females, and those who were not liable to the draft. The same speaker then urged those present to come forward and contribute to save themselves from the horrors of the war, for if they did not, Capt. Putnam would give them a tree pass to the field.

Mr. John B. Reed wanted to know who was to get the benefit of the money, and if he was drafted, was he to get his exemption for three years.

drafted would get the benefit, without regard Mr. Reed expressed himself satisfied with the explanation. Mr. Newman here stated that the colored laborers in the Commissary Department had contributed $5 each, making $200. The money was in the hands of Mr. C. E. Buck, at the 6th street wharf, and Mr. N. made this announce. ment to let the people know what the colored people were doing and who had the money. Mr. J. T. O. Brown said that he understood if each man in the ward would contribute $6.61 the quota could be filled; and if any man would not pay that he ought to go to the war. It re ted with the colored men to clear the ward, and now was the time to come up with the greenbacks, bluebacks, or any kind of backs.

Mr. Bowen-"Anything to cut slavery's head off. so ceme up. [Applause.]
It was then announced that $278 had been

A committee consisting of J. T. B. Wilkinson, Anthony Bowen, Geo. A. Newman, William Becket, Ferry Rider, and Abraham Dyson were appointed to convey the money to Island Hall and turn it over to the officers of the ward fund. Adjourned.
